DECLASSIFIED

Acting
Sunday
November 2, 1952

We went to lunch at the Jameses. They had a large number of people, and their usual marvelous food.

We went on from there to the National Gallery for the opening of the collection of French drawings, all of which, with one exception, had been lent by French museums. I also saw the recent additions to the magnificent Bliss collection of pre-Columbian objects. The French drawings are, as might be expected, wonderful examples.

Isabel and Traff Klots came to dinner with us, and we had much talk about France and fortunately little mention of politics.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE A/CDC/MR
REVIEWED BY CEL DATE 7-1-81
or XD: EXT. DATE
TS AUTH. REASON(S)
ENDORSE EXISTING MARKINGS
DECLASSIFIED RELEASABLE
RELEASE DENIED
PA or FOI EXEMPTIONS

DECLASSIFIED